

VASHTI WHITFIELD

Over the last twenty years, Vashti has lived, worked, and breathed a life driven by her passion to provoke, inspire, and facilitate the transformation of human potential. She's acclaimed as a transformational facilitator, executive coach, filmmaker, MC, and global speaker.

However, she is most widely known for her journey from personal tragedy to global inspiration, documented in the award-winning documentary feature film, "Be Here Now," directed by Oscar Nominee Lilibet Foster. The poignant story of her late husband and their family's journey from the red carpet to the chemo ward. The documentary has been featured on Netflix and released worldwide. As a true Alchemist and transformational facilitator, Vashti courageously utilises the documentary as a vehicle and tool to instil the concept of legacy-driven leadership and living a purposeful life.

With roles at Performance Consultants International, Coaching Australia & Coach Global, and as a faculty member of The School of Life, she is recognised for her unwavering commitment, candid and infectious personality, and unique expertise in elevating and excavating human potential.

Vashti's coaching experience spans executives, those in the public eye, and individuals seeking to play a bigger game. Renowned for her tough yet inspirational approach, she optimises legacy-driven leadership potential, professional success, and personal fulfilment.

She's also an author and sought-after human potential consultant, running a thriving international coaching practice. Her narrative of life, loss, leadership, and legacy continues to inspire globally.

While Vashti primarily focuses on coaching, consulting, and blowing the roof off at her speaking engagements, she also is passionate about her closeted stand-up comedy, parenting her two magnificent teens, and engaging in adrenaline-fuelled, lycra-clad cycling, running, and surf adventures. Overall, her story is a powerful narrative of radically turning loss into a remarkable legacy that continues to resonate with individuals worldwide.